

David Getty

Partner and Member of Board of Management

Since joining Gaby Hardwicke he has represented the Military Attaché's department of a Middle Eastern government, an international rock musician and a local company in a successful intellectual property claim against Mercedes.

Between law school and commencing practise he worked as a Parliamentary Researcher in the House of Commons, specialising in foreign affairs, in which role he visited Washington and Pretoria.

Prior to joining Gaby Hardwicke he was a senior associate with City firm Clifford Chance where he advised on intellectual property aspects of a simultaneous flotation on the London and New York stock exchanges, and also advised two overseas governments on Intellectual Property legislation. He has also acted for the world's leading computer games company, an international news and financial information company, an ITV franchise holder and a Formula One racing driver.

- Head of Commercial Law Services
- Member of the firm's Board of Management
- Solicitor and European Trade Mark Attorney
- Advises on all aspects of brand selection, protection and enforcement
- Provides strategic advice on intellectual property aspects of corporate transactions